News briefs

COMACC to hold commanders call

Gen. John Jumper, commander of Air Combat Command, will hold a commander's call Tuesday at 9:45 a.m. in front of Hangar 820 (in front of the 65th Operations Support Squadron).

Attendance is mandatory with the exception of an absolute minimum of must-man positions such as the control tower and command post.

Transportation will be available starting at 9 a.m. from Bldgs. T-100, T-217, the passenger terminal, civil engineer complex, base theater and clinic. Everyone should be in place by 9:30.

In case of rain, the commander's call will be in the community center.

Goal day set

Team Lajes met mission goals for June and earned a goal day, which is set for July 20.

Channel 36 up again

The Commander's Access Channel is operational again. For several days, public affairs was unable to post new information or remove any old information. To advertise on the CAC call 2-3347.

Congratulations

Air Force requests $80.5 billion for 2001

WASHINGTON (AFPN) — Defense officials recently released their proposed $329.9 billion budget for fiscal 2002, with $80.5 billion requested for Air Force-specific programs.

The Department of Defense budget, the largest since the mid-1980s, targets pay, housing expenses, infrastructure, military health care, facilities and processes.

According to Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) Dov Zakheim, the DOD budget is broken up as follows:

- Procurement, $61.6 billion;
- Operations and maintenance, $125.7 billion;
- Research and development, $47.4 billion;

- Military personnel, $82.3 billion; and
- Other, $10.6 billion.

The budget gives service members a minimum 5-percent pay raise, with targeted pay raises up to 10 percent for middle grades. Civilian pay raises are set for 3.6 percent, with targeted pay raises in critical skills, such as air traffic controllers. Out-of-pocket expenses for people living off base will be reduced to 11.3 percent and, according to Zakheim, will be eliminated by fiscal 2005.

Quite a bit of the Air Force budget is dedicated to human resources and recruiting and retention, said Maj. Gen. Larry Northington, Air Force deputy assistant secretary for budget. "The Air Force is a retention service, and

The Action Line is a tool to help the Team Lajes community. It's a direct line to U.S. Forces Azores and 65th Air Base Wing Commander Col. Bill Percival.

Callers may remain anonymous, but for a direct answer, should leave their name and phone number.

Why do we keep seeing same ads?

Question: Why do I see the same commercials over and over again on AFN and the commander's access channel hasn't been updated in quite awhile?

Answer: Thanks for your call. Some technical problems have been plaguing the equipment at AFN and public affairs. Due to a computer failure at Det 6, Air Force News is currently incapable of inserting BlueNotes or other new spot announcements into the television automation system. For several days, the system running the CAC was down for maintenance, but is up and running now.

AFN asks customers to continue sending information, because they are still producing radio announcements for the radio automation system.

AFN has ordered a new computer and was told it should arrive in approximately 10 days, so it will be operational soon. I apologize for any inconvenience you've experienced and assure you normal operations will resume as soon as possible.

America: Survivor, winner, good name

I was born unwanted and unnurtured with only a prayer of a chance of survival. During my infancy, I struggled to survive and to earn the respect of my older contemporaries.

The scars of being unique and different are deep. There were times I thought I would succumb to the pressures of survival.

Once I was literally torn in half in a struggle with my conscience, but I slowly matured. I knew if I could survive, my existence would be proof enough that my way of life was just and God's will.

As I increased my strength, the friends I enjoyed during my youth became allies. When they needed assistance in defending themselves, I placed no limits on my effort to aid them.

It was during these efforts that some of my opponents had to fall in order to respect me. Some of these, to this day, despise me for my strength and my freedom.

My life has been marked by internal strife and conflict, but God has always whisked the breath of life into my lungs and I have surged forward attempting to learn the formula for success.

I made rules to live by and tried to discipline myself accordingly. My rules have changed as I have matured and they will continue to change throughout my life.

During my life, I've grown from poverty and hope to limitless power and strength. But, my enthusiasm and efforts have had a great price. I find myself searching for new sources to make me strong and viable. I find myself making new friendships -- some of my older friends don't always seem as close as they once were.

It seems as if another test of life is upon me again. I don't know if I can regain the vigor and stamina of my youth, but again, I must put no limits on my effort. It seems I've almost become regenerated because I feel alone again.

My friends are fewer and skeptics are putting the odds against me. This makes me feel challenged and fills my need for excitement and invention.

I suppose my name isn't regarded as highly as it has been in the past, but I know the test of time will change people's perception again.

I have to remind myself that my name is of my own origin and it is a reflection of my unique birth. I feel it is a beautiful name and I am proud to bear it. My name is America — a good name and a winner for all who preserve it.

Air Force releasing staff sergeant list early

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AFPN) — For the second year in a row, the Air Force will release the list of the service's newest staff sergeants earlier than expected. The release, which normally happens the first week of August, will now take place the first duty hour of July 19.

"We're pleased with the early release because we expect another bumper crop of new staff sergeants this year," said Chief Master Sgt. Greg Haley, chief of the enlisted promotion and military testing branch chief at the Air Force Personnel Center here. "We have several airmen who need to get enrolled in and complete the airman leadership school before they sew on their new stripes, so this early release will allow commanders to get more of these airmen scheduled so they can assume their new ranks on time."

Another reason for the early release is the continued push by the Air Force to shorten the waiting period between testing and announcement. "If we're ready, why not release it?" Haley added. He said the early release cuts down on the anxiety level of "hard-working troops, who may have been studying for most of the year."

Lajes welcomes new commanders

Lynda Price

Public affairs volunteer

Team Lajes recently welcomed three new squadron commanders.

Maj. Jeffrey Bergdolt replaced Maj. Rex Adee as commander of the 65th Transportation Squadron, June 12. Bergdolt came to Lajes from Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala.

Lt. Col. James Bieda assumed command of the 65th Communications Squadron, June 26. He came to Lajes from Fort Bragg, N.C.

Bieda replaced Lt. Col. Michael Lewis who left Lajes to attend the Naval War College in Newport, R.I.

Lt. Col. Paul Bennett is no stranger to the 65th Medical Operations Squadron. Bennett took the reins as commander, June 27, after stepping up from serving as 65th Medical Operations Flight commander.

Bennett replaced Lt. Col. Brian Deckert who moved on to the 72nd Medical Group at Tinker Air Force Base, Okla.

JFCOM senior enlisted talks at induction ceremony

Staff Sgt. Beverly Isik

Public affairs

When the Joint Forces Command's Command Sergeant Major Mark Ripka visited Lajes, he spoke about leadership, influence, competence and teamwork during his keynote address at the Senior NCO Induction Ceremony, Saturday night.

"As a senior NCO, first and foremost, you've got to be an example," he said. "You can say a lot of things. But if you don't walk that talk and be that example for people in terms of competence and confidence, you can say anything you want, but you're not fulfilling that role."

Being a senior NCO is an important role in terms of just being able to influence others, he said. "It's all about building teams," the former airborne ranger said. "As a senior NCO your success comes because of what the team does, not because of what you do. It comes from what the team accomplishes."

While visiting troops in facilities around base, he discussed an upcoming NCO joint professional military education program.

The program, which is expected to be up and running in early 2002, is being designed to help NCOs who are going into joint billets understand the differences in the services. The course will incorporate the core competencies from each service.

"I think that's really important from the operational side as well as from the mentorship side," he said. "Our job is to grow the next set of leaders for our services. That's an awesome responsibility. You have to look outside of the service specific things and a little more broad at some of the issues and understand the different service cultures."

He briefly touched on retention and pay and how the senior NCO plays a key role in each. "The more senior NCOs allow people to feel like they're making a difference, then we won't have a retention problem," the sergeant major said.

Speaking of the January 2002 pay raise, he said, "It's the most significant one I've seen since the early '80s when President Reagan came into office."

He said he believes the defense department will continue to work on pay issues for the next several years, but that readiness has also got to be a top priority.

"We've got some readiness issues we've got to solve," the 26-year veteran said. "And retention is readiness. Quality of life and quality of work are readiness issues. So when we attack quality of life, quality of work and a few other things -- and compensation is a part of that -- we attack readiness. That helps retain folks. Retention is a part of readiness."

Some did not get correct pay

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AFPN) — Air Force Personnel Center officials here are asking people who have re-enlisted, extended their enlistments or been promoted recently to look closely at their latest Leave and Earnings Statements to ensure they are receiving all of their pay.

Problems with the Air Force's new personnel data system may have caused the "suspension of pay records" for hundreds who re-enlisted within 30 days of their dates of separation or who have extended their enlistment since late April. These problems could lead to those individuals not being paid, AFPC officials said.

"What this means is that some folks may not have gotten paid, or may not see expected increases in their pay," said Lt. Col. Richard Treasure, chief of the systems requirements division. "This really bothers us since we've been working hard with this transition to keep peoples' pay from being affected. And it takes on that much more urgency now."

There is, however, a way for those impacted to receive their money, according to Defense Finance and Accounting Service officials.

Members affected by this can take their re-enlistment or extension contract to their local accounting and finance office to receive their pay through electronic funds transfer. The electronic transfer takes, on average, three to five days, DFAS officials said.

At Lajes, it's taking at least two weeks to get the electronic transfer for the re-enlistment bonuses, according to Staff Sgt. Stephen Giavara, NCO in charge of Lajes' finance customer service and support.

"Sometimes we do see it faster, but that's the average time. After two weeks, if the customer still hasn't seen their money, they should contact us," he said.

Another problem affects the pay of airmen promoted in June.

Some officers and enlisted members promoted in June did not get their pay increase on time, according to Treasure. That problem should be corrected by the middle of July, he said.

So far, only a few of people at Lajes have had discrepancies with their pay, according to Giavara. "Anyone who has experienced any of these problems, should call us at customer service so we can send out a message and get things straightened out for them," he said.

Team Lajes members can call the accounting and finance office at 2-6271 or 2-5158 or Staff Sgt. Dawn Kost at the military personnel flight's career enhancements at 2-2155.

Online 7-level training becomes reality

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AFPN) — Air Force people in several career fields will soon benefit from a new program that allows them to complete 7-level school online. The Advanced Distributed Learning program has brought distance learning initiatives to the next level by developing a system that allows airmen assigned anywhere in the world to complete craftsman training courses via the Internet.

Some career fields are online now and others will soon follow, said Maj. Joe Tegtmeier, Air Education and Training Command's ADL branch chief.

"The command post craftsman course began operation on Feb. 12 and has already had its first graduate," he said.

He said he expects to see 11 courses online by this time next year.

The ADL program expands the capabilities of traditional distance learning, the major said.

"Distance learning is training without the formal presence of a classroom instructor, and advanced distributed learning extends the concept to include anywhere, anytime," said Tegtmeier. "We expect around 4,000 students to enroll in these courses this year."

Most of the courses should initially come from the training groups at Keesler Air Force Base, Miss., and Lackland AFB, Texas, said Gary Twogood, AETC instructional systems design chief.

"Knowledge-based craftsman courses are ideally suited for the ADL program," said Twogood. "As courses are brought online, the equivalent residence programs will no longer exist."

ADL offers the advantages of providing airmen with increased accessibility to courses and greater enrollment flexibility, said Tegtmeier. The Air Force is also likely to see reduced travel costs.

"Most importantly, by taking the training to our airmen, we can significantly enhance our readiness and operational capabilities while reducing the amount of temporary duty time required of our people," he added.

Shifting the philosophy of bringing airmen to training courses to taking the training to airmen in the field is a major principle supporting the ADL program, he said.

To enroll, eligible airmen can contact the job site training office at the base where the course originates, and they will be registered and assigned a password and user identification.

Eventually, airmen will be notified and enrolled as soon as they become eligible to complete craftsman courses, he said.

While completing an ADL course will be self-paced using the Internet, students will have the ability to telephone or e-mail instructors to ask questions and receive help, he said. During the initial implementation phases of ADL, base education centers will administer end-of-course exams.

Tegtmeier said his staff is facing several challenges.

"We know we have a long way to go, but we have reached a point where we have an 'e-training' site and are offering initial courses for airmen assigned anywhere in the world," he said.

For more information and course offerings, visit the e-training Web site at <http://www.maxwell.af.mil/au/afiadl/>.

Airman Kathryn Tucker scored 100 on her Career Development Course examination.

Services troop aces CDC exam

Michelle Andersen
Public affairs

Air Force leaders say today's airmen are smarter than ever. Kathryn Tucker is a prime example of just how smart they really are.

The airman from the 65th Services Squadron, with only one year in the Air Force and nine months on the job, just scored 100 on her Career Development Course end of course examination.

She's only the second person in the Air Force services career field to achieve such a score since that CDC's inception in April 1998, according to Paul Hackney, Air Force Institute of Advanced Learning program analyst at Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala.

Records at Lajes only go back to 1997, but Tech Sgt. Dennis Wright, former base training manager, said she's the only person in any Air Force career field here to ace the exam.

She doesn't attribute her high test score to having a photographic memory. "I'm not one of those kinds of people who can just absorb everything and go from there," Tucker said. "I have to study little by little."

Despite having attained outstanding results, Tucker said she was surprised by her score. "After all that studying, it was like it paid off," she said.

But, her supervisor, Staff Sgt. Rosa Aumack, NCO in charge, said she wasn't surprised to learn that the airman had scored 100 on her CDC exam. She pointed out that when Tucker scored a 98 on the practice test, she knew she would do well.

"She's a smart lady," Aumack said of Tucker. "I would not be surprised at all if she makes staff sergeant the first time."

Tucker has also been noticed by Lajes senior enlisted leadership. She was recognized as a SHARP Troop, by the Top III committee June 28. The award is presented to members who are sharp in uniform, honor military customs and courtesies, aspire to do their best, and are responsible and professional on and off duty. Only one airman and one NCO receive this award monthly.

But Tucker's CDC studies are not over, yet. Because of the extensive duties performed by services troops, the CDC requires two end of course examinations. Tucker is currently preparing for the second test.

Services duties include preparing and serving meals at dining facilities and flight kitchens, managing fitness equipment and programs at fitness centers and managing base lodging equipment and facilities.

Upon completion of her second CDC exam, Tucker plans to start taking college courses. She opted not to take college courses during her training, in order to concentrate on preparing for the exams. "I didn't want to learn 500 things at once," she said. "I didn't want to overwhelm myself."

She is no stranger to military life. Tucker was raised as an Army brat. She said it just felt natural for her to be in the military, and that military service would be a good start in life.

As for a future military career, "I'm still thinking about that," she said. "I want to take it day by day. But right now, I love the military."

Airman promotions

Congratulations to the following airmen who were recently promoted. Promoted to airman were -- Ryan Johnson, 65th Mission Support Squadron; Michael Jones, 65th Communications Squadron; Shanell Stephens, 65th Supply Squadron; and Tony Nolan, 65th Civil Engineer Squadron. Tommie Miers, 65th Operations Support Squadron, was promoted to senior airman.

Sharp Troops

The Lajes Top III presented SHARP Troop awards to Airman Kathryn Tucker, 65th Services Squadron, and Staff Sgt. Blake Holm, 65th Security Forces Squadron.

CDC high scorers

Staff Sgt. Kristina McDonald, 729th Air Mobility Squadron, scored 90 percent on her Career Development Course examination.

maintaining those field technicians is awfully important to us," he said.

The Air Force is trying to maintain its experienced people, targeting mid-level and senior noncommissioned officers, as well as mid-grade officers, said Northington. "We put a substantial amount of money in bonuses and special pays, maintaining the enlistment bonus to attract folks in and, in many cases, expanding the reenlistment bonuses to keep them in."

Other highlights of the Air Force budget include:

- Increased military construction, with 60 percent mission focused, 18 percent support related, and 22 percent dealing with quality-of-life issues;
- Sustaining current modernization programs, including revitalizing 2,189 military family housing units;
- Addressing degraded facilities; and
- Modifying, upgrading and improving reliability of aircraft.

It is important to defense officials that military people are treated in a way they deserve to be treated, said Zakheim.

A whole lot of bull

Island residents can find street bullfights in various villages around Terceira from May-October. U.S. Forces Azores regulations prohibit U.S. military members, civilians and family members from actively participating in any type of bullfighting on the island. To ensure safety when watching a street bullfight, choose a high place, out of the bull's range. Remember, the bulls can jump over many of the rock walls and temporary barriers that are built for the events. Be careful and use common sense.

Community Briefs

School registration begins

During the summer, elementary student registration will take place between 8 a.m.-3 p.m., and high school student registration from noon-4 p.m. Call Cidalia at the elementary, 2-3491, or Joel at the high school, 2-3357, for information.
